Open Rank Faculty Position
Division of Health Behavior and Health Promotion

The Ohio State University College of Public Health is searching for one or more well-qualified candidates for a tenure-track faculty position in Health Behavior and Health Promotion.

Candidates should be able to collaborate in our current research areas of tobacco control, cancer prevention, obesity prevention, or the role of policy in prevention, particularly focusing on primary prevention initiatives. The ideal candidate will bring expertise in one of the above areas plus a population focus such as early childhood, adolescence, or health equity.

Candidates must possess the potential for developing independent research funding and for high-quality teaching of graduate and undergraduate public health students.

A doctoral degree in public health, social or behavioral science, or a closely related field is required. Rank and salary will be determined by the candidate’s credentials. For appointment to a tenured position, applicants must demonstrate evidence of a strong track record of funded research and peer-reviewed publications. The starting date for appointments is open to negotiation.

The Ohio State University College of Public Health was formed in 1995 and is fully accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health. The School is an integral part of the country’s most comprehensive health sciences center, and is in the process of rapid growth in all its programs. Located in the state capital, a metropolitan area of over 1.5 million, Ohio State offers splendid opportunities for interaction with practitioners and policymakers as well as academic colleagues.

Applicants are asked to submit a CV, letter describing research and teaching interests, and copies of three manuscripts based on your research. Electronic submission (e-mail) is preferred. Review of applications will begin November 1, 2015.
