

Hi everyone, my name is Stephanie Oganuwe and I am a third year public health student specializing in environmental public health. I joined the College of Public Health during the spring semester of my first year after switching from a neuroscience major and I'm so grateful that I made that decision because I've been able to learn a lot about prevention, health promotion and even policy and I feel like those skills have been able to prepare me better for a career in medicine and a career in public policy. I am so grateful to you for helping me to make that happen by choosing me to be a recipient of the Ella Moore scholarship and I am super excited to see more first generation students receive that same opportunity and be able to pursue their interests like I have, so thank you so much and I look forward to connecting with you soon.
